

CALL for Papers

The Willamette Heritage Center at The Mill (WHC) announces the launch of its bi-annual publication Willamette Valley Voices: Connecting Generations, and invites submission of manuscripts for publication for the first issue, scheduled for May 2012. The publication's mission is to provide a showcase for scholarly writing pertaining to History and Heritage in the Mid-Valley. Its purpose is to promote historical scholarship focused on the communities of the area.

The theme for the first issue is "public spaces," including the built and natural environments. Some examples of the built environment could include public buildings, bridges, cemeteries, museums, public schools and universities, murals and parks. Natural spaces could include publically accessible rivers, mountains and forests. Articles should be both scholarly and understandable to a broad readership, and based on original research of a documentary, analytical or interpretive nature. Abstracts will be accepted through Friday, February 24 and should be a maximum of 200 words. If accepted for publication, final papers are due April 27 and should be between 2000 and 8000 words in length, including Chicago Style endnotes. All articles must be an original work and not previously published.

The Willamette Heritage Center at The Mill, a unification between Mission Mill Museum and Marion County Historical Society, is a stroll through the history of the Willamette Valley. Its 5-acre campus is home to the 1841 Jason Lee house (arguably the oldest wooden framed house in Oregon), 1841 Willamette Mission Parsonage, 1847 John Boon home, 1858 Pleasant Grove Church and the 1896 Thomas Kay Woolen Mill, named an American Treasure by the National Park Service. Since its founding in 1964 as a private non-profit association, Mission Mill Museum has established a reputation as a leader in the preservation and interpretation of Oregon's history. The museum's histories are shared with visitors through daily and group tours, speakers, living history, children's programs, hands-on activities, special events, the museum store and rental facilities. For more information call 503-585-7012 or visit www.willametteheritage.org.

The Willamette Heritage Center is a private not-for-profit 501(c)(3) organization. It is not managed by city, county, state or federal agencies.
